

CLAUDE SKILLS, SUBAGENTS & AUTOMATION — HOMEWORK

A skill that writes the first message.

I built /prospect-brief: give it the name of a local business, and it researches them, spots one real problem, and writes a first message that doesn't sound like a salesperson — then saves it to Google Drive.

"Build a real Claude Skill for one task, and connect it to a real tool. Pick one task you would genuinely do more than once. Narrow beats impressive."

— THE DAY 4 ASSIGNMENT

IN ONE PICTURE

WHY I BUILT THIS ONE

I run a small marketing agency in Formosa, Argentina. Getting new clients is our hardest part. Every new client starts the same way: I look at a business, find something they could do better, and send a first message. I do this over and over, and it's the step I skip when I'm busy. So I turned it into a skill.

What the skill does, step by step

- 1 Check the niche
It only works on the kinds of business my agency actually wants (clinics, gyms, hardware stores). If it's a restaurant, it stops and says why — those clients never stayed with us.
- 2 Research what's public
Instagram, Google, directory listings. Every fact it finds gets a link, so nothing is made up.
- 3 Find one problem
Just one — the thing costing them customers. Not a list of five.
- 4 Write two messages
A short Instagram message and a WhatsApp message. Neither one tries to sell anything. The goal is only to start a conversation.
- 5 Check the messages against 10 rules
Rules like "don't sound like a salesperson" and "never mention prices." If a message breaks a rule, it gets rewritten before I ever see it.
- 6 Save to Drive
The finished brief goes into a folder called ALM/Prospectos. That's the "real tool" the assignment asked for.

One important limit: the skill never sends anything. It writes the message and hands it to me. I read it and send it myself. That keeps a human in charge of anything a customer will see.

What's inside the skill

A skill is a set of instructions Claude follows every time. Mine has four parts.

1 • WHEN IT SHOULD RUN

Runs when I say

- "/prospect-brief a gym in Formosa"
- "prep me to contact this business"
- "write the first message for them"

Stays quiet when

- I'm searching for many leads at once
- I want a proposal or a price
- the business is already a client

2 • WHAT IT'S ALLOWED TO TOUCH

Only two things: web search, to read public pages, and one Google Drive folder, to save the brief. It cannot log into any account or read anything private. Small on purpose.

3 • THE 10 RULES FOR THE MESSAGE

These aren't new. I copied them straight from a lead-finding tool I already use, so the skill and the tool write in the same voice. A few of them:

- Don't sound like a salesperson.
- Never mention prices or discounts.
- Never name the agency.

- Never invent facts.
- Talk about their customers, not "engagement."
- Sound like a real person wrote it.

4 • WHAT "DONE WELL" MEANS

Every fact has a link. Anything it couldn't find is listed openly, never guessed. The message is counted against the length limit and the 10 rules, not just eyeballed. And it picks one problem, not a list.

I RAN IT TWICE ON REAL BUSINESSES

Test 1 — a gym

REAL LEAD FROM MY DATABASE

SAVED TO DRIVE

WHAT IT FOUND

7,853 followers, active on Instagram

INSTAGRAM

Their Instagram says they're at Gutnisky 4131

INSTAGRAM

Two other websites list them at Gutnisky 4522

2 DIRECTORIES

The problem, in plain terms: the gym shows two different addresses online. Someone new who searches "gym in Formosa" could go to the wrong place, or trust an old listing, and end up signing up somewhere else. A lost member before they ever walk in.

THE MESSAGE IT WROTE (INSTAGRAM · 243 CHARACTERS)

Che, vi el perfil de Hangar y está muy bueno lo que muestran del gym. Una duda: en Instagram figuran en Gutnisky 4131, pero en un par de guías de internet aparecen en el 4522. ¿Les pasó que alguien nuevo los fuera a buscar al lugar equivocado?

In English: "Saw Hangar's profile, looks great. Quick question — Instagram says you're at 4131, but a couple of online guides say 4522. Has anyone new ever gone looking for you at the wrong place?"

No pitch. No price. Just one thing I noticed and one question. If they answer, the next step is to offer a free 20-minute check.

Test 2 — a dental clinic

Here the skill caught two of its own mistakes, which is the point.

It stopped to check the country. Searching for "Formosa" also finds dental clinics in Brazil. The skill noticed the look-alikes, ruled them out, and because it couldn't confirm a street address, it wrote "not verified" instead of pretending it knew.

IT REJECTED ITS OWN FIRST DRAFT

The first message talked about follower counts — which breaks rule 7 (don't talk in numbers a customer doesn't care about) — and it was one word too short. So it rewrote it. Here's the version that passed:

Hola, ¿cómo andan? Soy Hakim, de Formosa. Trabajo con consultorios y comercios de la ciudad para que la gente que los encuentra en Instagram termine pidiendo turno, y les escribo porque su perfil me llamó la atención.

Atienden hasta las 22 y también los sábados, y encima ya tienen el link para sacar turno en la bio. Eso es justo lo que busca alguien que trabaja todo el día y no puede ir a la mañana. ¿Los pacientes nuevos que les llegan hoy vienen más por Instagram o siguen llegando por boca en boca?

In English: introduces myself, notes they're open evenings and Saturdays with online booking — perfect for people who work all day — and asks where their new patients come from.

WHERE THE HOMEWORK STANDS

The skill, written and complete	DONE
Run twice on real businesses	DONE
Connected to a real tool (Google Drive)	DONE
Uploaded to Claude and tested with the slash command	TO DO
Short Loom video walkthrough	TO DO